Round Table Talk about Food

CHATS WITH A POPULAR HOSTESS

BY MRS. OLIVER HARRIMAN,
Chairman, Exposition of Women's Arts and Industries

When entertaining at dinner there are many fine points of hospitality and service to be considered by the hostess. But if I were asked to emphasize the one most important, I should say without hesitation that it is this: Whether the dinner is to be a small and informal party, or a large and impressive one, the hostess should invite only those whom you know will be congenial. No dinner can be successful if guests are ill-assorted by reason of conflicting tastes or temperaments.

A great many hostesses mistakenly believe that the small and intimate dinner is much easier to carry off well than the large affair. But that really is not so. The small party is always much harder on the hostess than the larger one, for the large party gains of its own momentum. It depends upon the hostess for a good beginning, but the guests play the major part in its success from then on.

A word of caution must follow that statement, however. Perhaps the most unforgivable faux pas of all is to attempt to give a larger dinner than one can conveniently accommodate in one's dining room, or than it is possible for one's cook or waitress to negotiate with ease. Needless to add that in the servantless house the small, informal, intimate dinner should be the hostess's

THE COCKTAIL COLUMN

One southern host recently surprised his guests at cocktail time by serving with the beverage a mystifying tidbit composed of rolled dried beef grated with a horseradish and filled cheese mixture—a most appetizing creation. The cocktails, by the way, were not of the fruit, fish or vegetable type!

A Seaside Cocktail.

1 cup of catsup
1 cup of clam juice
2 spoonful of lemon juice
A pinch of celery salt
A dash of Worcestershire sauce
A dash of Tabasco sauce
Put in a shaker with cracked ice. Shake well, strain and serve.

Grapevine Cocktail.

Use a glass of rich purple grapejuice to a glass of strained orange juice and a bottle of ginger ale. Mix well, pour over fine ice and serve with very delicate cocktail glass. The grapejuice is a good for these waters; so is anise seed.

choice. The large dinner with formal service is almost impossible of achievement, unless the hostess is wise enough to entrust it to a fine caterer who will relieve her of all troublesome details.

The question of introductions is a matter for each hostess to decide for herself. The conventional rule is that they should be made at small parties, but are optional at large formal affairs, where guests are supposed to speak to each other regardless of introductions.

My personal feeling on the subject has always been that things are made much easier for everyone when introductions are made as fully as possible. The hostess should, of course, bring her men guests to women whom they have not met and present them. In making introductions a short resume of the persons need not take up much time, and it creates a very friendly, easy atmosphere. This would be possible only for parties of not more than twelve. But I like to remember that in the south, where perhaps more thought is given to gracious courtesies than elsewhere, introductions are carefully made at both large and small parties.

The unsophisticated hostess often wonders what to do about the tardy guest. Should she wait—and run the risk of ruining a delicious dinner for those who were thoughtful enough to arrive on time? Or should she go right ahead at the appointed hour, and let the late member make the best of things?

You need never wait long for anyone at dinner . . . not more than 20 minutes at the most. If a guest is not on time give him this amount of grace, and then start without him. If he arrives dreadfully late, make no break in the serving of the courses, but let the laggard take up dinner at the point it has reached when he appears.

One's own taste and possessions direct the table decorations as well as what shall be served at the meal; and volumes can be said on these points. When carried out with nicely and good judgment they indeed become more important factors. But as an entertainment rather than merely a meal . . . the successful dinner party depends upon the observance of the points we have just been discussing equally as much as it does upon the food that is served.

Chips or Crackers?

Cheese chips or wafers are delicious with all soups. Serve them sometimes as a change from crackers. They are good, too, for use with soups, cocktails, tomato juice and with assorted cakes for afternoon tea.

AT THE CHILDREN'S TABLE

BY MARY HOPE NORRIS
Founder, Mothers' Radio Round Table Club

Within recent years research carried on in the dietary use of gelatin has revealed many splendid factors in its favor. One of the greatest of these is its healthfulness in the diet of infants, a young child.

Let us consider first the needs of his majesty, the baby. The value of gelatin in the baby's diet lies in its power to break up the fat masses or milk curds that form in his stomach. This in turn prevents colic and like disorders that are common to very young infants. The addition of gelatin to the baby's milk also is helpful in treatment of intestinal disorders. Only plain gelatin should be used, and that under doctor's instructions.

Progressing along the span of years, we find that scientific research reveals that gelatin is no less valuable for other ages. It is an aid to the digestion and assimilation of foods, and it also has great food value in itself. Some authorities say that it is particularly beneficial in diabetic diets, in the dietary of invalids and older people, and in coping with various diseases. It is especially helpful where the patient needs to get as much benefit as possible from his food

THE CHEF SUGGESTS . . .

BY JOSEPH BOGGIO
Hotel Plaza, New York.

I know of no food that requires more thoughtful handling than does fish. When prepared with imagination—well seasoned and properly garnished—it becomes a dish for the epicure. But let the cook forget his cunning, and send fish to the table without embellishment and almost always have a dish that lacks flavor and piquancy.

Sole, for example, is a very delicate fish, without distinctive flavor. But it is a very fine fish. Especially when prepared in one of the many original recipes known to the accomplished chef. From the recipes used at the Hotel Plaza I have chosen two which should find acceptance in the average home; they are neither very costly nor very difficult to prepare.

The first is filet sole veronique. To make it you should butter the bottom of a saucepan and in it lay the filets of fish. Season them, cover with a little excellent fish fumet (fish stock) and a little white wine (you can buy this at any fancy grocery store). Allow the fish to poach, and when it is cooked remove it to a platter. Garnish this around with peeled and pieces of stewed grapes, then reduce the liquor to one-half and thicken it with two beaten egg yolks, but keep it away from the fire. Add a dash of butter, season to taste, add a few drops of lemon juice; then coat the fish with the sauce and serve.

Sole bonhomme is made in this way: Butter the bottom of a dish intended for the sole and sprinkle in it two chopped shallots and two ounces of raw minced mushrooms. Lay the sole upon this garish and season with salt, pepper and pieces of butter. Moisten all with one-quarter pint of white wine and as much fish fumet and poach gently, taking care to baste the fish from time to time. When the sole is cooked remove it to a platter, then add a little cream to the sauce and reduce quickly to half; finish with two ounces of butter and season to taste. Coat the sole with the sauce and set it to glaze in a fierce oven.

At the Hotel Plaza crab meat remick is always made with fine fresh crab flakes, but you can readily make use of good quality canned crab if you so desire.

Select some large crab flakes, put them in a clam shell or baking dish and heat them in the oven. When warm remove them and coat with remick sauce and put under a hot fire to brown.

Sauce remick is made as follows: Put in a bowl one-fourth teaspoon of English mustard, one-eighth teaspoon of paprika, a pinch of celery salt, a dash of tabasco. To this add one-fourth cup of chili sauce and one cup of mayonnaise. Mix all together with a dash of Tarragon vinegar.

Asparagus de Luxe.
Cook fresh asparagus until tender in boiling salted water. Drain, place in a hot dish and serve with dressing which has been made as follows:
In a frying pan put three table-spoons of butter, and when almost brown, add a scant cup of bread crumbs. When crumbs are brown and crisp add a finely chopped hard-boiled egg and a teaspoon minced parsley. Heat thoroughly and pour over the asparagus.

Egg Plant Arabesque.
Peel and slice in thick slices several fresh tomatoes; saute a minced Bermuda onion in butter; peel and slice an eggplant and saute it in butter. Now in a baking dish place a layer of eggplant, one of tomatoes and one of onion; repeat until dish is filled. Cover with bread crumbs and grated cheese and bake until light brown.

Stuffed Spring Lamb.

Have the butcher remove the shoulder blade from young spring lamb so that it leaves a nice pocket for stuffing. Sprinkle the pocket and outside of the lamb with salt and pepper and fill the opening with the following stuffing:

Two tablespoons chopped onions browned in 3 tablespoons butter, 2 cups soft bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon chopped celery tips, 1 teaspoon chopped mint, 1-2 teaspoon salt, pepper to taste.

Stitch or skewer the pocket; spread three tablespoons butter over the lamb and put in a roasting pan with a little hot water. Bake in a very hot oven for 15 minutes; lower to moderate heat and finish cooking, allowing 15 minutes to the pound and basting every half hour. Add more hot water, if needed.

Easter Egg Salad.

Hard boil a half-dozen eggs. Cook fresh red beets until tender. Slice them and pickle them in mild vinegar well seasoned with salt pepper, a dash of sugar and spice. Shell the eggs and immerse with the beets in the pickle liquid. Allow them to stand overnight and until wanted for dinner or luncheon next day. When removed the eggs will be beautifully tinted.

This is a beautiful salad when arranged in a large bowl. The beets should be well lined with the shredded lettuce, and the eggs placed in the center, nest fashion.

SAVING WITHOUT SCIMPING

BY EDITH M. SHAPCOTT,

Nutrition Consultant, Home-Making Center, New York

Your reputation as a housewife may rise or fall with your cake! For a taste of the widespread and deserved popularity of "store cake," there are still many home-makers who enjoy making their own cakes, pies and other pastries.

Even the most experienced housewife has occasional doubts about just how the cake may turn out... especially when it is bringing home his business partner or the boss who has heard but a good cook she is.

But there are tricks to every trade. Making a cake is no magic art to be eyed for. It is a knack that can be cultivated by following certain fundamental rules that bring a reasonable degree of certainty.

Nothing is so extravagant as a failure cake, you know. Therefore, first be sure to choose the right kind of flour and use the best of other ingredients. Most women find that special cake or pastry flour is much more successful than bread flour, since the cake flour contains only 6 to 10 per cent of gluten—a smaller percentage than either bread flour or semolina flour, which often runs up to 20 per cent. A much smoother-textured cake results from the former's use.

The finest quality of gluten, suitable for pastry flour, is found in the red winter wheat, and in its preparation only certain parts of the wheat are used... those containing chiefly starch cells. To make the flour these parts are separated from the rest of the wheat, ground under steel rolls, sifted, re-ground and resifted through the finest silk bolting cloth. To a good pastry flour no cornstarch is added.

Considering how carefully the flour is prepared for our use and satisfaction, shouldn't we use the same care and precision in selecting ingredients as well as in mixing our cakes or pies and baking them?

The second rule is careful measurement of the ingredients; for only definite proportions produce the desired result. Good mixing is the third consideration... the beating and folding motion which incorporate air into the mixture and produce lightness.

Point No. 4 is, select a dry flour, for a good deal of moisture will make the cake shrink away from the pan, or the top may be sugary, or you may find a solid streak at the bottom of the cake. Pastry flour costs a few cents more than ordinary flour, but you will find it most satisfactory in the long run, and there need be no waste or experimentation.

Still another rule, No. 5. The batter, although mixed ideally, may be ruined in the baking. You have a better chance of success with an oven regulator, but in any case a thermometer may be used to test the temperature. Be sure that the heat is kept even, not allowed to rise and fall. The old superstition that the one who opens the oven door makes the cake fall has been found scientifically sound. It both jars the cake when it is rising and cools the oven, too.

The whole family agrees that cake, pie or pastry of some sort tops off the meal. It has a high caloric value and is also a wholesome food... qualifications which justify its including it in the menu without thought of extravagance... so long as the recipe is reasonably economical and the making of the cake a success.

FAVORITE RECIPES OF FAMOUS WOMEN

MRS. ROSE E. BRUNNER

Let an important culinary contest appear... and Mrs. Rose E. Brunner's recipes—known far and wide for their antiquity and their oddity—inevitably carry off the prize. In magazines and papers published from coast to coast, Mrs. Brunner's beaming countenance and pictures of her fanciful dishes will be seen.

Always there is something different. Sometimes it is a concoction of her own; but more often Mrs. Brunner's contribution will be an ancient recipe from the remarkable collection owned by her... many of them dating back to the early sixteenth century.

Most of these recipes were used during Queen Anne's time, at the palace in England, and Mrs. Brunner tells us they are still in favor today. For a special treat she sends us two delicious old recipes... a fruit soup for the first course and a dessert for the ending of the meal.

In between the two we really should table salad lies in its variety. You need a small, longish tray in order to arrange it most artistically. In the center place a mound of cold cooked spinach, well drained and seasoned, marinated with a mellow French dressing and topped with a slice of cooked egg. At one side place a tuft of cooked cauliflower; at the other side, tips of cooked asparagus, both well seasoned and dipped in the dressing. Tiny beans or peas will fill the chinks between, and over all pour more of the French dressing, which the Italian cook makes with the purest of olive oil, flavored with a faint, tantalizing tang of garlic.

Such a salad is a meal in itself; a wonderful contribution to Steak Night, when the broiled meat and baked potato welcome the required green food in salad instead of in cooked vegetable form.

On Sunday night you can please the man with a fish salad of the zesty sort... perhaps anchovy and egg salad. If fruit salad is your choice, try halves of spiced canned pears, lukewarm reception from the man in many a home. One must set before him a luscious vegetable salad such as Italians know how to prepare, or give him a salad of substance like the hard-boiled egg and ripe olive combination, or a good new cabbage salad topped with a dressing of Roquefort cheese. Then one may be rewarded with a showing of interest as great as that of the most enthusiastic sister.

FOODS THAT ARE FRIENDLY TO BEAUTY

BY KATHLEEN MARY QUINLAN

Once at dinner I caught a friend making a very wry face over the cold, clammy demitasse which I had always known her to sip daintily with all the appearance of extraordinary refinement. I inquired if the coffee were cold. "No, but I can't get used to drinking it without sugar," she replied. I asked if she were trying to develop an oriental palate or was she following a reduction diet, which—I thought privately—she could ill afford to do, since she was one of the Garboesque type. No, she explained, but "they" said that sugar was bad for the complexion, and so she was trying to do without it altogether.

Speaking from the standpoint of a beauty specialist, having the care of the body and the beauty of the skin in mind, I should like to say that an excess of anything is harmful. When women are advised by physicians or beauty culturists to "cut down on sweets" it is generally because they have been eating quantities of them and failing to balance the diet. If the daily menu includes the required amount of fruits, fresh vegetables, milk and other important foods, there will be little inclination to over-indulgence in sweets, starches, meats, or any other single element.

According to the best medical authorities there are, of course, diabetics and people with marked idiosyncrasies of like nature, who should refrain from sweets. But these Draconian restrictions do not apply to the normal person, who may well adopt as his guide to food—as in all other matters—that wonderful old Greek axiom, "Nothing to excess." Within these limits there is almost nothing that cannot be eaten or done.

While sugar is not a regulatory food, not a builder or repairer of tissues, it nevertheless has an important place in the diet as a supplier of energy. When one expends a great deal of energy there are times when—in spite of a good breakfast and lunch—one suddenly feels weak and exhausted... with several hours of strenuous work ahead or a series of even more tiring engagements, and no meal, as yet, on the horizon. This draining of energy makes one haggard, strains muscles and tissues, makes the lines stand out! A little sugar here often proves a good Samaritan and supplies the energy needed to "carry on." And a little of it goes a long way, for there is no aliment that is so rapidly converted into energy.

A slice of cinnamon toast made with whole wheat bread buttered and lightly dusted with sugar and cinnamon is very good for the mid-afternoon period between two meals that seem as far apart as the antipodes. A candied baked apple sprinkled with nuts is a pleasant variation, or whole wheat crackers with a bit of preserve or marmalade.

I am often asked whether pastry is harmful to beauty. I do not believe so, if it is used as an occasional dessert at the close of a light meal. No—when it comes to prescribing foods that are friendly to beauty we need not deny ourselves any good thing, provided we remember the old axiom—"Nothing to excess."

VICTORIAN APPEALS RETURN!

Into our modernistic midst there come discreet but definite signs of a return to Victorian dining... according to the maître d'Hotel of the Hotel Carlyle in New York. Brought about, doubtless, by the distinct reaction this season to the Victorian influence in dress and in decoration. But just as the new frocks merely suggest the Victorian bustle and home decoration restores the caprice and comfort of the much-maligned queen, minus the confusion and fussiness of her era, so we are evolving modest adaptations of the leisure and charm of Victorian dinners.

It is not predicted that we shall ever return to the elaborate method of service observed in bygone days. There was something too theatrical in the pure Victorian atmosphere. Then husky footmen in satin knee breeches, silk stockings and silver-buckled shoes, would fling open French doors when the hostess gave her mysterious sign, and announced: "Madame est servie!" And the fun would begin. There was no such thing as a dinner-dance. In those

Police on Lookout for Communists at National Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—(AP)—Officers of the American Revolution led for special police protection to after adopting resolutions denouncing communism.

Officers were stationed at every entrance to the hotel with instructions to no one to enter except on business. Plainclothesmen were scattered throughout the audience.

With the meeting of the organization's annual convention thus effected, the delegates listened to an address today by Representative H. H. Clegg, chairman of the house communist investigating committee.

Fish, whose address had been blue printed by the organization with his name, said the state department had co-operated fully with his committee's investigation of communism.

A difference of opinion prevailed regarding the request for the speaker, Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, president general, said there was nothing sensational about the presence of the police, explaining an extra guard was sought several days ago.

Mr. William Sherman Walker, chairman of national defense, however, said:

"If special protection has been given, it is because we always have when anything like this comes up. Communist groups are so likely to be with their literature to distribute."

Officers said they had been asked to come to the convention hall by D. R. officials who mentioned they received threatening letters. They said they had been instructed to be guard against "any kind of disturbance."

Earlier, the convention gave unanimous endorsement to the findings of the Fish committee which denounced communism and urged the next congress to enact legislation "to rid our country of all seditious and communist agitation having in view the overthrow of our system of government and the establishment of a dictatorship."

Mrs. Walker was given an ovation when she proposed the anti-communist resolutions. A similar resolution given by Fish, whose remarks about communism had been edited along with an attack upon the state department's Nicaraguan policy.

Resolutions also were adopted urging that the navy be built up to the strength permitted under the London treaty, advocating further restrictions on immigration, registration of aliens and deportation of communists.

FRAUD CHARGED TO CARLING FIRM

City Seeks Judgment for Installments on City Hall Site.

Legal fight over the old city hall lease entered a new phase Friday when the city of Atlanta entered Fulton superior court with charges of fraud in the transfer of notes of the Carling Hotel Company, lessor of the site, and began a new effort to collect rent on the Forsyth and Marietta street corner.

A receiver to take charge of notes received by the Dinkler Hotels Company in the sale of the Carling Hotel Company's interest in the hotel of that name in Jacksonville is asked by the city.

The city seeks a judgment for installment arising under the city hall lease contract from November 1930 at the rate of $3,333.33 a month, and also for the full amount due on the contract because, it alleges, the contract has been broken by the Carling Hotel Company. Payment of the judgment sought by the city could be made from proceeds of the notes, if the city wins its suit. Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of superior court, signed a temporary order to restrain the status of the notes and get the petition for a hearing on July 4.

In a statement issued Friday afternoon, Robert B. Jones, of counsel for the defendants, charged that the city's petition is "full" of untrue allegations.

"Stock of the Carling Hotel Company was paid for," Mr. Jones said. "The assets were not transferred in fraud. The Carling Hotel Company owned the Dinkler Hotels Company more than $300,000 for money loaned, and the assets of a face value of $174,000 were transferred in part payment of the debt. This is a perfect right to do, and it was done by proper corporate action."

In reference to the sale of the stock of the Carling Hotel Company, Mr. Jones said: "I would say that there was no point in keeping it. It was not worth anything, there were no assets, the company had a lease on the Carling hotel in Jacksonville, and it was a losing proposition. The stock was sold to the owners of the company."

"This talk of fraud is all tommyrot," said Mr. Jones. "When the time comes we will file the necessary answers to the allegations. There is nothing to the suit."

Mr. Dinkler was out of the city Friday and could not be reached for a statement. Under the lease contract, the Carling Hotel Company agreed to rent the old city hall property for $10,000 a year, the first $10,000 to be paid in cash and the balance in installments of $3,333.33 a month, as soon as the property was turned over to them, and the property was tendered to them on or before November 1, 1930, the city alleges. The rent has not been paid, and, according to the city, the Carling Company has breached the contract and all money agreed to be paid under the contract is a liability against the company.

The city points out in the suit that it has undertaken to attach property of the Carling Hotel Company for the balance of the debt. "Answer nothing," After the contract was entered into, the Carling Company sold out its interest in the Jacksonville hotel to E. S. Richardson for $177,000, of which $12,500 was paid in cash and the rest covered by promissory notes, the city alleges. These notes, petitioner alleges, were either made out to or credited to the Dinkler Hotels Company, said Dinkler Hotels Company allegedly transferred the money for the Carling Hotel Company and a subsidiary thereto.

The city asks the court to void the claim of the Dinkler Company against the Carling Company and to decree that money advanced, if any was advanced by the Dinkler Company for installation and operation of the Carling Hotel Company, be decreed as payment or part payment on the stock held by it in the Carling Hotel Company. The city also asks for a decree to the effect that stock subscribed to the Dinkler Hotels Company and the other defendants was never paid for except as to the sum advanced by the Dinkler Company when the Carling Company was begun, and that a decree be entered for the value of the amount due on the stock so subscribed and unpaid for, and that a judgment be given in favor of the city against the stockholders for the sums that should have been paid for the stock. Judge Moore ordered that the Carling Company be served by publication.

NO MONEY PUT UP. The city alleges that the Carling Company had put up no money at the time they started and the Dinkler Hotels Company put up the money for the Carling Company. The plaintiff alleges that the defendants were not only the presumed owners of stock of the Carling Company, but also were owners of the stock, or most of the stock of the Dinkler Hotels Company, and that operation of the Carling Company was part of the Dinkler Hotels Company and a subsidiary thereto.

The city asks the court to void the claim of the Dinkler Company against the Carling Company and to decree that money advanced, if any was advanced by the Dinkler Company for installation and operation of the Carling Hotel Company, be decreed as payment or part payment on the stock held by it in the Carling Hotel Company. The city also asks for a decree to the effect that stock subscribed to the Dinkler Hotels Company and the other defendants was never paid for except as to the sum advanced by the Dinkler Company when the Carling Company was begun, and that a decree be entered for the value of the amount due on the stock so subscribed and unpaid for, and that a judgment be given in favor of the city against the stockholders for the sums that should have been paid for the stock. Judge Moore ordered that the Carling Company be served by publication.

Cost of Government Cut To 4 Billion, Hoover Says

Expenses Will Be Under Estimate, President Asserts in Detailed State-

WASHINGTON, April 24.—(AP)—The cost of running the federal government for the next fiscal year was estimated by President Hoover today at $4,119,230,649, a decrease of $315,799,083 under the estimated cost for this year.

The figure, arrived at by the chief executive after conferring with cabinet members, is an increase of $187,000,000 over the budget submitted to congress when appropriations were made for the year ending June 30, 1932, and wipes out the budget bureau's estimate of a $300,000,000 surplus.

In addition the budget bureau's estimate of total revenue for the 1932 fiscal year of $4,085,119,927 did not take into account the sharp falling off of income tax as shown in collections last month.

The estimated cost of running the government for the present year ending next June 30 was estimated at $4,435,029,732. At the close of business on April 22 total governmental expenditures for the year were $3,451,159,206.

On that day the government had collected from all sources $2,649,961,409, leaving it with a deficit of $801,167,797.

The treasury already has estimated there would be a deficit of more than $700,000,000 at the end of the present fiscal year. There has been a drop of $310,000,000 in income tax this year as compared with last year, the total being $1,529,448,465. Customs receipts have dropped $138,000,000 and other internal revenue has decreased $45,000,000.

The figures made public by Mr. Hoover do not include the operating expense of the postal service, but did include the estimated deficit for that branch of the government.

The largest saving in the estimate for 1932 was in aid to agriculture. This year $341,645,134 will be needed. Next year's figures call for $190,873,025, a difference of approximately $150,000,000. This resulted from non-recurring appropriations made for this year for the farm board and drought relief.

Funds for 1931 for the war department show a $12,000,000 decrease and those for the navy a $35,000,000 increase. The total for national defense will be $741,227,072 as compared with $717,372,440 this year.

The amount for judicial, law enforcement and regulatory commissions was placed at $106,701,481, an increase of $10,000,000 over the present year and $23,000,000 over 1930.

Aids to the merchant marine, including losses on transportation of foreign mail on American vessels, jumped from $94,701,234 this year to $134,978,550 in the 1932 estimates. Public buildings, exclusive of construction activities for the army and navy, totaled $457,500,000 in the 1932 estimate as compared with $434,000,000 this year.

The total for all construction work now progressing is at the rate of $725,000,000 a year, which Mr. Hoover said was about $500,000,000 in excess of the rate prior to the depression.

The cost of the soldier bonus legislation was placed by the president up to the present time at $912,000,000, with additional applications at hand to bring the total to $1,050,000,000.

NEW DEATH MYSTERY CONFRONTS POLICE

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 24.—(AP) Peace officers, worn by their efforts to solve the gruesome slayings of Virginia Brooks, 11-year-old schoolgirl, and Louise Teuber, 17, were confronted by a third mystery killing here today.

The body of Mrs. W. D. Bibbens, 35, was discovered in her apartment last night. Officers were unable to determine immediately whether she had been strangled or her throat had been cut. A newspaper dated April 18 found in the room indicated the approximate time of death.

Mrs. Bibbens usually wore many jewels and was a follower of the Agua Caliente races. The apartment had been ransacked and gave evidence of a violent struggle.

Captain of Detectives Paul Hays said her jewels were missing and robbery may have been the motive. He sought a man who he said had occupied the apartment with Mrs. Bibbens until recently. Walter W. Bartleman, 63, elevator operator, was held for questioning.

Captain Hays said Bartleman answered the description of a man who aided Mrs. Bibbens in leasing the apartment last fall. Close friends knew little of her past life.

This killing came just five days after Miss Teuber's body was found dangling from a tree near here. Two state criminologists then were still here aiding police and sheriff's officers in their attempt to solve the slaying of Virginia Brooks, whose body was found in a gunnysack on Camp Kearney mesa, March 11.

$25 FINE IS GIVEN TO WOMAN DRIVER Mrs. J. B. Reynolds, 574 Penn avenue, N. E., was fined $25 and costs by Recorder John Cone Friday afternoon for driving past a red traffic light at 10th and Midway streets Tuesday afternoon.

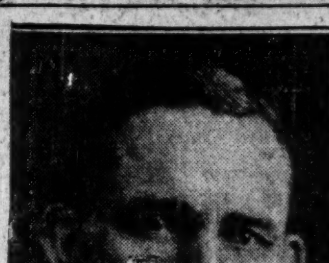

Mrs. Reynolds stated in court that she did not violate the law and accused traffic officer W. J. Malcom of "insolence," in making the arrest. After court Recorder Cone stated that, though the charge against her was specifically that of running over a red light, the evidence showed it was a case of resisting arrest, and that he therefore imposed the heavy fine.

EARTH TREMORS ROCK WEST COAST

Los Angeles City Hall Is Shaken; No Damage Reported.

LOS ANGELES, April 24.—(AP)—An earthquake that lasted five seconds shook Los Angeles and the suburbs at 10:28 a. m. today but, with the exception of a few shattered store windows and some broken chinaware, the sole result was a highly excited populace.

The center was apparently in the Santa Monica bay district. Several store windows fell in, plaster in offices and homes was cracked and dishes broken.

From offices, homes and apartments, people, disregarding the warnings of earthquake experts, fled into the streets.

In Hollywood the shock was slight, but it was more pronounced in Los Angeles. Redondo Beach, Compton and Torrance felt it almost as strongly as in Santa Monica and small amounts of damage were reported. To the east in Pasadena and Alhambra the intensity was slight. Pictures and lights swayed in these cities and the housewives' dishes remained unscathed.

RITCHIE SCORES PRESENT DRY LAW

Maryland Governor Favors Home Rule as American Principle.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 24.—(AP)—Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, told the South Carolina Bar Association in an address here tonight that he believes "the perplexing question of prohibition must ultimately be settled by the application of the principle of home rule."

Referring to national prohibition, he said that "the whole thing is governmentally unsound, and it is a waste of money to maintain it. It will square with American traditions and institutions and with the American principle of local self government."

Governor Ritchie, for years an outspoken foe of national prohibition, said that he believes "the low estate to which law and government have fallen is . . . due to the rise of a conscious and extraordinary social interest in the actual moral life and conduct of the individual, and the exploitation of this by the unprincipled care-takers and guardians of us all."

Referring to the proposal for "local home rule" on prohibition, Governor Ritchie said that "if a remedy along these fundamental lines is adopted, then you of the south need have no fear of the future. The belief of the country recognizes and understands your problems. I for one would countenance no remedy which did not leave the people of this great and loyal and chivalric section of our land free, completely free, to solve this question and in the way you know to be best."

But do not forget that the peoples of other sections of the country have their problems springing from national prohibition. The story of organized underworlds, of vice and corruption, of commercialized vice and producing the gangster and racketeer has come to be an all-too-familiar one in some of the great cities of our country, and corruption has even spotted the judicial sunshine itself.

"If one's own knowledge and observation do not suffice to show the necessity of prohibition, then let me read to you the reports of the members of the Wickersham commission, which will be irrefutably convincing," Governor Ritchie said.

FARM BOARD HEAD SPEAKS IN AUGUSTA

Received only an average price, had contributed to the lowering of grades. The co-operatives eliminate that evil, he said, by providing expert grading and prices based on the grading, for the farmer's benefit.

"As the American Cotton Co-operative Association grows in size and handles more cotton manufacturers of cotton goods will profit increasingly from its presence in the field of cotton marketing. Since farmers are now receiving the premiums for quality which manufacturers always paid but which the farmers seldom received, production of improved cotton will naturally increase over the next few years."

While recent cotton prices are very low and unprofitable, Stone said, "Cotton farmers are realizing more for their cotton than have been possible without the co-operatives."

Stabilization operations and aid to cotton co-operatives, Stone said, are not a government subsidy or the government's business, but simply the farmers helping themselves with aid from the board.

He quoted a Memphis broker, writing in a trade paper, on the score of elimination of manipulation from the market. The broker wrote that "cotton goods will profit increasingly from its presence in the field of cotton marketing. Since farmers are now receiving the premiums for quality which manufacturers always paid but which the farmers seldom received, production of improved cotton will naturally increase over the next few years."

Cotton Outlook Bright.

The opinion that the outlook for American cotton, cotton is brighter than at any time in the past two years was expressed by Carl Williams, another member of the federal farm board.

"There is," he said, "every indication that the end of the lowest point of the present cycle of consumption and supply has been reached. The relative supply increases the price differential between American and foreign-grown cotton are certain to increasingly favor the cotton of the American cotton abroad. These favorable differentials may be expected to increase during the remainder of this season and through the next year."

"There is no prospect whatever that the 'threatened tragic disappearance' of American cotton from the world markets can or will take place. Exports of American cotton in February this year were 31,000 bales more, and in March were 127,000 bales more than in the same months a year ago."

He added that "coals have been carried to Newcastle this year by the actual export of more than 60,000 bales of American cotton to India. Exports to China and Japan also have increased."

"The farmer," said Williams, "is suffering today from reduced buying power caused by low cotton prices and, along with the textile industry, is suffering from a greatly reduced demand for cotton goods. A common enemy is hurting both the cotton grower and the cotton spinner. That enemy is the acute depression, especially severe business depression, that has engulfed the entire world and has been especially felt in the more industrialized nations."

He explained that cotton consumption in the United States goes up and down with general industrial production.

"There was a decline in 1921, he said. Cotton started upward six months before general business. In the present depression it started down

Likes Penitentiary, So He Decides To Stay

SAN FRANCISCO, N. M., April 24.—(AP)—Ed Sweet appeared at the state penitentiary yesterday and told Warden Swope he'd like to look the place over. He paid the 25-cent fee. "Pretty nice place," he remarked afterward. "Think I'll stay." Then he tipped the guard who showed him through a quarter.

"Stay?" echoed the warden.

"Sure," Sweet drew out commitment papers, reciting he had been sentenced to a year for stealing.

His arrival without guard followed his decision to vacate an appeal to the supreme court.

In June, 1929, a month before the down turn in business and four months before the drastic break in industrial securities. It reached its lowest point in December, 1930, and is now on the increase.

Williams predicted an increase in carry-over of American cotton next August but a reduction in the foreign carry-over as a result of well-managed mills in the orient. He predicted a reduction of production in foreign countries as a result of low prevailing prices. He said it was too early to guess how much acreage would be cut in the United States this year.

The real salvation of the southern cotton farmer this year, he added, "will depend more on his ability to raise his own food for the family and feed for the teams than on high prices for cotton."

To sum the whole situation up, therefore, it would appear, he said, "that the actual outlook for American cotton today is brighter than it has been at any time in the last two years. The low point of restricted use of American cotton abroad has probably been reached and passed. Prospects are all for the actual reduction in the cotton supply of foreign countries outside of Russia. Time is certain to bring definite recovery to business activity and industrial production in foreign countries. Time is equally certain to bring recovery in business activity and industrial production in this country."

"As these things happen, they will mean increased demand for American cotton in this country and abroad and that increased demand will in time be translated into terms of price to be paid to the cotton farmer himself and into a renewed period of prosperity for the textile industry."

B. E. Geer, of Greenville, S. C., president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, told the organization an intimate relationship exists between economic and social betterment of the cotton farmer and the prosperity of the cotton manufacturer.

"It is to be questioned," he said, "whether cotton manufacturing in the south can again reach a satisfactory and stable position until agriculture has been reassociated, our farms have been repopulated and many of the fundamental problems that are now facing agriculture have been solved."

"I cannot believe that our business as cotton manufacturers can permanently prosper unless this prosperity be shared with that great army of consumers who are at the same time the producers of our raw material."

"While I do not believe that the cotton manufacturing industry alone can solve the problems of the farmer in the southern states, I do believe that we can materially aid in this direction and it is my honest judgment that the time has come when the cotton manufacturer of the south must seriously consider the question of how to better the condition of the cotton farmer of the south."

He added that the deflation of farms has brought about serious losses in farm property values and consequent reductions in tax receipts from this source.

More and more the burden of taxes is falling upon the shoulders of other classes to take care of the increasingly heavy demands to cover governmental expenses," he said. "The establishment of the farmer of the south in prosperity is one way to secure for the cotton mills some relief from our present excessive tax burden."

Geer said "the prostration of agriculture in the south rests seriously upon our mill villages to which farmers, especially tenants and croppers, are migrating in ever increasing numbers."

He recommended the appointment of a committee to work toward bringing about uniform operating practices among cotton mills. He praised the work of the Cotton-Textile Institute, Wade Thorton, of Danvers, Mass., president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, told the convention tonight that "mills which did not curtail production during the recent period of depression are beneath contempt and too selfish and greedy to be permitted communion with the decent element of the cotton industry."

Mr. Thorton also voiced displeasure at those under-selling competitors and said he opposed the prevention of women from working in mills at night. He said they should be allowed to work whenever they pleased.

MEMORIAL DEED ASSURED ATLANTA BY VENABLE HEIRS

such sweeping powers, and that authority would have to come through special enactment of the Georgia legislature.

The half-interest deed which came to Mayor Key from Horace Russell, president of the Chamber of Commerce, after the mayor received it from Lawrence McCord, chairman of the parks committee of the Chamber of Commerce, provides only for the construction of a memorial "according to the general character and plans heretofore contemplated by Guiton Borglum, the sculptor, or, according to the plans to be formulated by a self-perpetuating commission to be appointed and legally authorized to complete the monument."

Mayor Key further expressed the intention of conferring with Borglum in Europe next month. The sculptor plans to go abroad for dedication of the Woodrow Wilson statue he carved in Czechoslovakia, while the mayor accepted formally the invitation of the French government, attended the Colonial Overseas and Possessions exhibition.

Letter From Heirs.

Following is the text of a letter from Mrs. Orme and Mrs. Roper:

"Hon. James L. Key, mayor, Atlanta, Ga.

"Dear Sir:

"Your letter of April 23 addressed to us, which has not been received by us but the publication of which has appeared in the daily papers has been brought to our attention through the publication, and assuming that we will at some later date receive the letter, we are now replying thereto."

"In the beginning, we desire to say that we are, as we have always been, wholeheartedly in favor of the building of the monument to Stone Mountain in memory of the Confederate soldiers and sailors. This has been our cherished desire for many years, and we are now, as we have always been, willing to co-operate to the fullest extent to the accomplishment of this end. We are willing, as we have always been, to give without one cent of remuneration, our interest in the property. Our only object with regard to this matter is to see that the property is used for this purpose. We will unhesitatingly sign any papers that may be necessary to absolutely assure the giving of our interest if and when there is any sort

Fokker's Attack on Byrd Stirs Leaders of Aviation

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—Publication of Anthony Fokker's autobiography, "The Flying Dutchman," had sent the barometer of controversy to considerable height tonight. Comment by the plane maker on the flights of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, particularly the trans-Atlantic flight which ended in the waters off the French coast aroused the chief interest.

ADMIRAL BYRD.

Fokker writes, who piloted the plane Fokker navigated it after reaching France.

In this Admiral Byrd agreed. He told reporters in St. Louis that Balchen was entitled to full credit for the successful flight, which he had handled the plane. Admiral Byrd, however, had no comment to make concerning other statements concerning himself in the book until he had read the full text.

Balchen's comment was that he didn't know where Fokker got his information about what happened during the flight to France, but that "there are no mistakes in it."

"The controversy doesn't worry me. The entire matter—the ocean flight—was conducted in a sure and effective manner. I am positive that if it was to be done again there would be no change."

"I have the highest regard for Admiral Byrd, Bert Balchen and Lieutenant Noville, who were on the flight. I did have a high regard for Mr. Fokker! But I think he must be getting old."

"The Flying Dutchman" gives much of the credit for the successful crossing of the ocean and the landing in the sea to Balchen. It was Balchen, of reasonable assurance that the monument will be built. Can anyone reasonably ask more of us than this? "We wrote you to the same effect on March 18 but up to the time of the publication of your letter of April 23 I cannot believe that our business as cotton manufacturers can permanently prosper unless this prosperity be shared with that great army of consumers who are at the same time the producers of our raw material."

"In your letter, above referred to, if it is correctly quoted, you state that 'the city of Atlanta would guarantee that a great Confederate memorial would be faithfully executed.' In view of this statement we now cheerfully agree, on the condition named by you, to comply with your request or demand for an unconditional deed, as soon as you are prepared to have the city's guarantee, as above stated, legally executed."

"Since we are prepared, as above stated and on the conditions above stated, to comply with your demand for an unconditional deed, we assume that it will not be necessary for you to have your threat of condemnation proceedings, as contained in your letter of April 23, carried out."

In our letter to you of March 18, we proposed to deliver to you for the city of Atlanta a deed conveying our interest in this property, the only condition being that the property should be used for the purpose of creating a monument and that if it was not used for this purpose within 30 years then it should revert to us. Surely no one desiring to contribute money for the carrying of the monument would be unwilling to do so except upon the idea that the monument would be built within 20 years.

Mr. Borglum, the sculptor, has repeatedly stated that five years is all the time that is necessary.

"Again assuring you of our wholehearted and sincere desire to give the property for the purpose above named, we are

Respectfully yours,
"MRS. CORBELL VENABLE ROPER."
"MRS. ROBERT VENABLE ROPER."

Letter From Key.

Text of Mayor Key's letter to the two heirs follows:

"Mrs. Corbell Venable Roper, and Mrs. Robert Venable Roper, Atlanta, Ga.

"Dear Mesdames: I received your favor of March 15 in due time, but have delayed answering the same with the hope and expectation that after further consideration and reflection, you would find your way clear to make a deed to the city of Atlanta which would be acceptable, and which would not present an obstacle in the way of carrying out the enterprise."

I have proposed that the city of Atlanta be the trustee of the property for the benefit of the public. That the city of Atlanta would then guarantee the security of the property for the benefit of the public, and would guarantee that the purpose of the donors, namely that a great Confederate memorial, would be faithfully executed, and would guarantee to the public that every dollar contributed by them should actually go into the work."

I have assumed, and now assume, that on account of past failures in this enterprise that the public would not spend its money on any monument unless the public owned the property forever. In fact I would not ask the people to contribute to build any monument except on their own property."

The 20-year defeasance clause which you have inserted in your deed to put it in your power to defeat the title of the city and take back the property under certain conditions would leave the enterprise open to future controversy. I propose that when the public takes this matter over, it shall be removed entirely out of the field of controversy."

Other Heirs Praised.

"I have received a deed to one-half interest from your uncle, Samuel H. Venable, and from your aunt, Mrs. Frank T. Mason, which deed conveys a one-half interest absolutely and unconditionally except for certain matters which I have suggested in order to preserve the character of the enterprise and the manner of carrying it on. In this deed I have shown the character of co-operation, sympathy and self-effacement that is necessary for the success of this movement and for which the public owes them a profound debt of gratitude."

"I am hoping you will see your way clear to make a similar deed. I am asking you now to make it. Any other kind of deed would be an obstacle to no further controversy or outside control."

"In this connection it might be well to remind you that the property which the city seeks has no commercial or market value of any significance. Whatever amount is adjudged against the city will be cheerfully met in order that nothing shall stand in the way of the success of this movement."

"Yours truly,

J. Lawrence McCord, who has conducted the Stone Mountain negotiations for the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Friday made the following statement:

"It has occurred to me that information of the importance of the foundation or right of way for any public improvement, of whatever kind or nature, is all important and my experience for the past 15 years fully bears out this statement. The average opinion is first centered on the cost and how to raise the money, etc. While this is important, the foundation is of first importance."

"For example, we will consider some of our major improvements in the past years:

"Madison avenue required 36 months of effort to secure the right of way. Thirty-five separate trades had to be made and some 12 or 14 exchanges in property; while a few citizens secured the money to finance the building in one afternoon."

"On Peters street some seven years were required to get the foundation all together, and the number of exchanges and purchases of property, would run well over 100. The money for the work was not first considered; in fact, many public improvements failed when the money is in the hands of the public, for the reason that the right of way or foundation is lacking."

"Pryor street required over five years of effort, requiring well over 200 separate agreements."

"The twin viaducts, after the money was in the bank, required over two years to get the tracks lowered—or the foundation."

"The recent government postoffice required many times the effort to get the foundation to get the money."

"The Spring street ramp was all but lost with the money on hand, for the lack of a foundation. And so on with many other improvements."

I have been connected with in the past."

"It has occurred to me that information of the importance of the foundation or right of way for any public improvement, of whatever kind or nature, is all important and my experience for the past 15 years fully bears out this statement. The average opinion is first centered on the cost and how to raise the money, etc. While this is important, the foundation is of first importance."

"For example, we will consider some of our major improvements in the past years:

"Madison avenue required 36 months of effort to secure the right of way. Thirty-five separate trades had to be made and some 12 or 14 exchanges in property; while a few citizens secured the money to finance the building in one afternoon."

"On Peters street some seven years were required to get the foundation all together, and the number of exchanges and purchases of property, would run well over 100. The money for the work was not first considered; in fact, many public improvements failed when the money is in the hands of the public, for the reason that the right of way or foundation is lacking."

"Pryor street required over five years of effort, requiring well over 200 separate agreements."

"The twin viaducts, after the money was in the bank, required over two years to get the tracks lowered—or the foundation."

"The recent government postoffice required many times the effort to get the foundation to get the money."

SECRET PLACES

BY JOAN SUTHERLAND

INSTALLMENT XXX.

Travers Sinclair got up from his chair, and began walking up and down the narrow room; beyond the high barred windows the daylight filtered in, palely yellow from the smoke-laden London sky, and the small gas-fire that burned in the grate was depressingly inadequate. The famous lawyer was cold, and his physical discomfort was increased by his mental disturbance, for he was quite well aware that he had an extraordinarily difficult case to handle. His client's story was anything but satisfactory, and, in his own mind, while believing Staire innocent, he also believed he was shielding the real murderer. Whichever it was, the defense would be painfully thin, resting more on the policy of forcing the prosecution to prove guilt, than enabling the prisoner to prove innocence.

He glanced at Staire now as he paced up and down the room, and frowned. A wholly innocent man would be anxious to tell his story—to have the chance from the witness box to state the truth, and at least attempt to clear himself; but this man had refused from the beginning to risk cross-examination, and Sinclair was unhappy about it. That Staire knew more than he had admitted was a certainty, but that he was guilty Sinclair did not believe. He had met Staire in London and Parisian society several times and been very agreeably impressed by him. Though he knew too much of the complexities of highly civilized human nature to let that bias his judgment, even now his occasional keen glances did not correct that early impression but rather strengthened it.

Staire, for a man about to be tried for murder after over three months' detention without bail was surprisingly calm and self-controlled. The case had been remanded twice, since the French evidence had taken time to collect—the policeman who was summoned when the body was found—D'Arbly's chauffeur who had deposited his master and a lady at the former's door—the taxi driver who had driven Feodor—people who had seen D'Arbly at the market hall at the opening—the commissaire who had questioned Feodor, and half a dozen others. Now the witnesses were finally assembled and the case about to come on. Staire, he thought, was standing the ordeal magnificently. He was pale, and the lines about mouth and eyes, always a little harsh, were now deep and grim, the eyes were strained, he looked years older, but his manner was as composed and courteous as ever, and whatever dark secrets his conscience might shelter, it was evident that he could command both nerve and temper with admirable skill.

Realizing there was no more to be said, Sinclair came to a standstill before his client's chair.

"Well," he said, "I think that's all. I have told you exactly what my line will be, and I will do all in my power for you. Luckless! Marston is an extraordinarily humane and merciful-minded judge—more so than any other judge, I consider. I shall see you tomorrow for a few minutes. Please God, we'll pull it off!"

He went, leaving Feodor to be conducted back to his cell, and on the following day, the trial opened—as a sensational piece of legal drama as the most jaded appetite could desire. The morning that Feodor's trial opened rain descended in London in sheets of driving water, and the wind from the northeast made the streets a veritable purgatory for those about. Toni, very white, but quite composed, followed her mother and uncle into the latter's car, and during the drive to the Old Bailey sat looking straight before her not speaking, not even consciously seeing the gray, rain-swept pavements of hurrying traffic. These weeks of waiting had been to her a torture, which she had borne with an apparent stolidity that had severely amazed her family. All her life Toni's habit had been to express her feelings loudly, remarking often that she could put up with anything fate chose to deal to her, as long as those around her were aware of it, and expressed their sympathy or pleasure promptly. What Lady Alice had not quite realized was that when it came to the depths of her nature Toni was an utterly different being, not desirous of breaking down the barriers of self-control and silence.

All the way she was silent, and Lord St. Maire's occasional jerky remarks were addressed solely to his sister, although his attention was for his niece, whose courage had called forth his secret admiration.

The courts all was confusion; the crowding public, bearded barristers, hurrying clerks, and policemen—large and imperturbable. Toni, still with that sense of unreal enfoldment, followed her uncle and mother, found herself in the courtroom, was put into a seat between them, and glancing around saw the crowd that filled the court and felt herself awake into active passionate life.

So this was what people did; ordinary decent people—they came to see a fellow creature, an utter stranger to them, on trial for his life, tortured and questioned—came to watch with avid curiosity every change of expression or wince of pain—every privacy of mind outraged. These people would watch Feodor, try to peer beneath the mask of his face and find out what he was feeling and thinking. The fierce earnestness of maternity leaped to life in Toni's heart; to save him that degradation, that shameful publicity, she would gladly have flung herself to court for starting gas or covert whisper, for was she not to see Feodor, to see him for the first time after twelve weeks—twelve interminable dreadful weeks? And though they would be able to exchange no word, the very sight of his face would mean something to her starving passion.

Toni shot him one blazing glance; then he saw her steady herself by an effort visibly intense, and a moment later the judge's entrance was heralded as everyone rose.

From the opening of the case the interest in court was intense. There was not a seat, not an inch of room anywhere—such a scandal and such a sensation had not been known for years, and society crowded in—eager for a new excitement.

Toni came in for her full share of attention from the press. In her own world, but the public as such did not know who she was till the first day's proceedings were over, and by the beginning of the second day she cared nothing for starting gas or covert whisper, for was she not to see Feodor, to see him for the first time after twelve weeks—twelve interminable dreadful weeks? And though they would be able to exchange no word, the very sight of his face would mean something to her starving passion.

Maitre Siboux, Feodor's godfather, was in London, having come over for the French government, and Toni had one moment with him before the court opened when he held her hands in his and looked steadily into her eyes.

"Courage, mon enfant!" he said, and had she not known it, he had used the same words to Feodor less than an hour before. "The good God is not absent because He hides His face," and Toni nodded, and for the first time that morning smiled very faintly.

"I will not forget," she said. "It is not me that matters. It is Feodor."

But as the day advanced, as the long tedious hours passed, she realized that there comes a time when the over-drawn body rebels; and a day or two later—just after the evidence given by the concierge who had spoken to Feodor on that fatal night—Toni's strength gave way in spite of her fierce determination to endure, and she sank without warning into a limp little figure, against St. Maire. St. Maire was a big man, and picking her up he carried her out of the court. A few minutes later he was beside her in the car being driven home, and Toni, very white with half-closed eyes, was listening to what he had to say.

Continued Monday.

11 HELD IN MURDER OF AGED NEGRO WOMAN

Robbery Motive for Killing in Hatfield Community of Wilkinson County.

GORDON, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—Eleven negro men, charged with the murder of an aged negro woman, were held in the Hatfield community of Wilkinson county, where she lived alone, on the Macon-Winchester highway, about 10 miles east of Gordon.

Discovery of the body was made on Sunday morning about 10 o'clock by J. T. Hatfield and Lonnie Pace, who were strolling in the woods near their homes. Sheriff James Depue, Jr., Ellis McDowell and B. S. Mills, coroner C. C. Thompson and Chief of Police A. B. Wood, of Gordon, were called to the scene and began an investigation that resulted in the arrests.

Robbery was said to have been the motive for the murder. The negro woman was known to have had a large sum of money in her possession, much of it in large denominations. One sister had recently told her that she had a large sum of money, and she was said to have been carrying it on her person.

Officers stated that they found 144.50 in silver quarters. A coffee can under her bed yielded $96 in silver.

While the inquest was being held, it was stated by the officers, Leroy Adams, who was with the negro woman, that she had been taken to her home and buried.

The officers said that Lewis Phelps and Jimmie Lee Bryant, two of the negroes under arrest, have made a complete confession of the murder to the sheriff, and other officers, including E. J. Bowman, special agent in charge of the Georgia Highway Patrol, who are assisting in the case.

Just how much money was taken from the aged negro has not been determined. The confession of Phelps and Bryant shows that they were the actual murderers, but that they had been aided by a third person, a white man, who has been found and identified.

The sheriff also said that he had found bloodstained currency traced to the negroes, which furnished a clue which led up to the arrests.

Moye had just finished a term in a penitentiary for assault with intent to murder a negro in Gordon.

The slain negro was known as Aunt Fannie, and she had many friends among the white people of the community, all of whom entered into the task of finding the slayers. They offered a reward for the capture of the slayer.

Bowman said that he had positive information that three of the men arrested have been robbing box cars in Gordon and McIntosh.

WO IN BIBB COUNTY

JAIL DENY CHARGES

MACON, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—Two negroes being held in the Bibb county jail in connection with the slaying last Saturday of Frances Fountain, aged Wilkinson county negro woman, said Friday afternoon that they had not committed the crime, but were merely being held as "eye witnesses," county officers reported.

Both negroes, Jimmie Lee Bryant and Lewis Phelps, according to the officers, said that they saw Henry Moye, Wilkinson county farm hand, kill the woman in the head, criminally assault her, and then rob her of a "sack" full of money.

The negroes were quoted as saying that they did not participate in the robbery and murder, but went with Moye to the woman's house under pretext of death.

"Moye gave me $20 and Phelps $15, and told us if we told anyone he would kill us," Bryant said, according to the officers. "He met me and Phelps in the road that evening and told us to follow him. He said he would kill us if we did not go, so we went."

Bryant and Phelps said neither of them "touched the woman."

They said Moye struck her about the head with a hammer, and then assaulted and robbed her, according to the officers.

MACON, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—The organization of private owners of real estate into an affiliated group to be associated later with other state groups was announced as an objective of the Georgia State Real Estate Association Friday at the close of an all-day session here.

The morning meeting was given to discussion of tax matters and a report of the tax committee of the association, which was adopted into a resolution asking for economy in government and relief from the load of taxes on real estate.

John J. Thompson, Atlanta, president, is to appoint a committee to work out the organization plan.

The city now buys its power.

NEGRO CONFESSES THEFT

Finds Charges Dropped

MACON, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—L. Thomas, negro, former mail carrier of Little Rock, Ark., may get back to his home town, but not at the expense of the United States government as he had planned to do, he learned here Friday.

Thomas entered the office of assistant United States Attorney A. Edward Smith Thursday, and said he was wanted in Little Rock on an 11-year-old charge of withholding funds collected after the death of a parcel post package.

There, his conscience had got the best of him, and now he desired to quit his teaching profession in Atlanta and Georgia and return there to be punished.

Mr. Smith ordered the negro to be sent and dispatched a telegram to Little Rock. Federal officials there ascertained that the negro was right, and that the charges had been dropped years ago.

Thomas was released. Now he is happy and his conscience is clear, he said. If he gets back to Little Rock he'll have to pay his own fare.

JOHNSON, 2 NEGROES

DENY MURDER PLOT

MACON, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—While Alvin Johnson, 34, and two negroes, still maintained their innocence in connection with the slaying of Luther J. Clegg, Scotland, Ga., merchant, on the night of April 8, Delois Clements, 19, who has confessed his part in the slaying and robbery, Friday was equally as vigorous in his implication of them.

Johnson would not tell them for anything in the world if they were not guilty," Clements said, "but I have told the truth and intend to stick by it."

"Johnson just begged me not to tell on him, but I had to do it," Clements, the son of J. H. Clements, Telfair county's representative-elect, said Johnson instigated the crime, and that Will Chandler, one of the negroes, fired the fatal shot. He said Johnson was not at the scene of the murder, but that he had planned it and was "due to be there."

He said Johnson "did not show up, but he told me next morning to keep quiet about it."

The youth said he, Johnson, and Chandler were to leave for Cincinnati as soon as Johnson could get his old car fixed.

CLASSICAL TEACHERS

END MEETING TODAY

ATHENS, Ga., April 24.—The three days' session of the Classical Association of Middle West and South will close Saturday morning.

An appeal to forget the objectives "Latin and Greek and teach them as absorbing, interesting subjects" was made by Dr. W. D. Hooper, University of Georgia.

"There is a changed conception of old colleges over which Latin, Greek and mathematics reigned," he said.

"The objective of a college course today is to furnish students with a large mass of facts as possible, in such form that they can immediately apply them. The result is that the college, with its honorable tradition, is rapidly becoming a vocational school which makes no claim to a cultural atmosphere—a Babel—in which its inhabitants are scattered by the confusion of tongues which they use, and are held together only by such a common interest as athletics. College men, even college graduates, find no common ground for conversation except this topic of universal interest—and we complain that it is over-emphasized. Who is to blame for the over-emphasis?"

Edward K. Turner, Emory University, and Edwin L. Green, University of South Carolina, gave talks. Speakers for Saturday's program are Catherine Tarnow, gives Scott college; W. N. Thomas, Howard college; Ruth Carroll, Hartsville (S. C.) High school; J. E. Eubanks, Junior College of Augusta; and J. D. Cane, Florida State College for Women.

Governor-Elect Speaks at Memorial Exercises in Fort Valley.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—Governor-elect Richard B. Russell, Jr., was the guest of Fort Valley and Peach county Friday and was honor guest at the Daughters of the Confederacy dinner for veterans, and speaker at memorial exercises.

The governor-elect addressed strictly to the subject of the Confederacy, eulogizing the southern soldier and southern womanhood.

He began by saying: "I always want to place a southern sunken flower on the grave of a Confederate dead." He dwelt upon the character of Lee and said the "true American knows no north, no south and no east and west."

In closing he turned to the small group of veterans and said: "Take this message as you go on the last long march to great comrades, that we still keep Memorial Day. The daughters of the south are as pure as the mothers of the sixties and the men glory in the blood of their fathers."

He was introduced by Legislator Leroy Fagan, a grandson of a Confederate veteran, and throughout his address was applauded.

SPRAYING OF PEACHES ADVISED THIS WEEK

FORT VALLEY, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—Oliver I. Shapp, entomologist in charge of the United States peach insect laboratory here, Friday advised peach growers to begin spraying operations the last of the week, as late varieties of peaches are now ready for another application.

Hilary, Georgia, Belles, Elbertas and Hales should be sprayed at once and Mayflowers and Uneddas the latter part of next week along with Early Rose and other varieties.

Unusual weather conditions, Mr. Shapp said, threw the spring spraying schedule off, necessitating a modification of it this year's crop. March, 1931, was the coldest March in 40 years with the exception of two.

Warm periods that usually come during the spring months have been absent and the average daily temperature was slightly above normal on only six days in March. As a result, the curculio was about a month late in appearing in orchards and due to the absence of that insect at present the first spray was not advised.

No such similar situation, Mr. Shapp said, had occurred during the 11 years he has been here.

GEORGIA HAS NEW TYPE OF GANGSTER PICTURE

The Georgia theater this week, with its new program opening this morning, has something new in gangster pictures in "City Streets." This production tells the story of a youthful westerner (Gary Cooper) who becomes involved with a woman who, when he marries her, tries to wean him away from his profession and his associates. The attempt results disastrously; the wife is unfaithful to her fighter-husband and the plot rapidly moves toward divorce for the wife and a tremendous climax fight in the ring between the husband and the other man.

AT REGULAR PRICE SCALE

The Fox, again substantiating its claims for unusual screen features during the month of May, this morning opens a week's run of "Trader Horn," the sensational and thrilling story made in Africa. Despite the "road show" classification of this picture, there is no advance in prices for the engagement. Its length, however, has necessitated a slight change in the Fox's usual Saturday program arrangement. Instead of showing the feature picture at the start of the noon opening program, the stage show will come first.

Fanchon and Marco's idea of the week is "Seasons," which boasts a splendid list of well known performers as well as the Mack Bisset dancers—18 terpsichorean artists supreme.

STORY OF PRIZE RING

"Iron Man," the new screen feature at the Capitol today, has almost uncanny similarity to a story of real life that has been occupying much space in the newspapers of late weeks. It is the story of a champion prize fighter who becomes involved with a woman who, when he marries her, tries to wean him away from his profession and his associates. The attempt results disastrously; the wife is unfaithful to her fighter-husband and the plot rapidly moves toward divorce for the wife and a tremendous climax fight in the ring between the husband and the other man.

STAGE OPENS PROGRAM AT FOX THIS MORNING

Manager Carter Barron, of the Fox theater, announced Friday that it has been necessary to make a slight change in his customary program arrangement for Saturday.

Owing to the length of the feature picture, "Trader Horn," the first show of the day, with doors opening at noon, the curculio was about a month late in appearing in orchards and due to the absence of that insect at present the first spray was not advised.

No such similar situation, Mr. Shapp said, had occurred during the 11 years he has been here.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN.
CHICAGO, April 24.—(P)—Extensive stop-loss selling of grain futures corn in particular, forced corn and oats down to new low records today. Wheat and rye were also depressed. Corn closed nervous, 1-4 to 1 cents lower, wheat 1 cent down, 1-8 cent up, oats 3-8 to 7-8 cent off and provisions varying from 5 cent setback to 10 cents advance.

Breaks in corn prices tumbled the cereal down to the lowest level since 1922. Oats quickly followed, and fell to a point unequaled as far back as 1905. Operating as a drag on corn was knowledge that owing to poor weather improvement of late the market for mill-feeds was receding, and that the corn primary receipts, although less than the total a week ago, were almost double those of a year back.

Lowest prices of the day in com-and in the grain list as a whole were current during the final decline. Wheat advances which at first had given all cereals some show of firmness were more than wiped out after corn weakness spread into the wheat pit.

Contrary to earlier indications, the export business in North America wheat proved to be of relatively small volume.

Oats were affected mainly by co-

TRADING IN STOCKS IS MORE ACTIVE

Bond Dealings on New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—The curb market ran into a flurry of selling in the late trading today, coincident with the suspension of a large commission house.

Wide assortment of industrial issues changed a point or so lower.

Some of the new issues again under pressure. Vacuum dropped 1-1/2 points to 22, and Gulf and Indian Territory, Cities Service, however, closed with a fractional gain.
